The statistics of the trade on the Nadia rivers, the Midnapore, Hijili, Kendrapara and the Orissa Coast canals, represent the total trade carried down and up those channels; the portion of that trade which finds its way into Calcutta by boat and steamer is registered again at the cordon of stations around the city and by the Inland Steamer Companies.

2. Boat trade on the Nadia Rivers—Tables 1 and 2—The trade along these rivers, which comprise the Bhagirathi, the Jalangi, and the Mathabhanga, is chiefly with Calcutta, Bihar, Western, Eastern and Northern Bengal, and Ghazipur and Gorakhpur. The proportion of the trade of Calcutta to the total trade on these rivers in 1900-01 was 58·4 per cent of the downward trade, and 20·4 per cent of the upward trade. The Jalangi is the most important trade route on these rivers, about half the total trade being registered there. The total downward trade on these rivers decreased by a little over 700,000 maunds, chiefly under gram and pulse, wheat, linseed, and mustard seed owing to scanty crops; but the upward trade increased by 280,000 maunds, mainly under coal and coke, salt, and kerosene oil. The principal articles carried downwards on these rivers were food-grains and jute chiefly from Western, Eastern, and Northern Bengal to Calcutta; raw silk from Malda to Murshidabad; oilseeds from Bihar, Eastern, and Northern Bengal to Calcutta; and tobacco-leaf from Bihar and Northern Bengal to Calcutta. The chief articles in the upward trade were salt, which was carried from Calcutta to all the blocks and to the United Provinces; kerosene oil went to Western, Eastern, and Northern Bengal; rice, husked and unhusked, from Western and Eastern Bengal to Bihar, a small quantity going to the United Provinces. Sugar was exported from Calcutta to Western, Eastern, and Northern Bengal. The increase in the trade in coal was due to a larger demand in the silk filatures in the Murshidabad, Malda, and Rajshahi districts.

3. Boat trade on the Midnapore Canal—Table 3—This trade is mainly with Calcutta and the Midnapore and Hooghly districts. The trade with Calcutta is far the largest, having been 68·7 per cent of the total trade in 1900-01. Notwithstanding the opening of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, both the downward and upward trade increased mainly owing to a larger trade in unhusked rice. The increase in the downward and upward trade in unhusked rice was due to the failure of the rice crops in that part of the Hooghly district commanded by the canal, which led to larger consignments of unhusked rice thither from the direction of Calcutta and Midnapore. The kerosene oil carried upwards was taken from Budge-Budge to the Midnapore and Hooghly districts; unrefined sugar was brought chiefly from Hooghly to Calcutta; salt was consigned from Calcutta to Midnapore and Hooghly. The remarkable increase in the downward trade in stone and lime was due to larger consignments from the Midnapore district to the 24-Parganas and Hooghly districts.

4. Boat trade on the Hijili Canal—Table 4—The districts served by this canal are Midnapore, Cuttack, Balasore, and Calcutta, the most important trade being with Calcutta, 87·3 per cent of the total trade being carried to and from that city. The trade each way on the canal diminished slightly, the largest decrease in the downward trade being in rice, husked and unhusked, which is ascribed to indifferent crops and to the diversion to the railway of the trade for the Central Provinces. The trade in kerosene oil consisted of exports from Calcutta to the Midnapore, Cuttack, and Balasore districts; unrefined sugar and salt mainly from Calcutta to Midnapore.

5. Boat trade on the Kendrapara and Orissa Coast Canals—Table 5—The trade on these canals is with the same districts as those served by the Hijili canal, and the same causes which led to a contraction in the traffic on the latter canal operated in restriction of trade on these canals. Of the total trade, 31·3 per cent went from Calcutta. The principal articles in the downward trade were food-grains, which were sent from Midnapore and Balasore to Calcutta, and in the upward-trade coal and tobacco-leaf, which were taken from Calcutta to Midnapore, and kerosene oil from Calcutta to Balasore and Cuttack.

6. Boat and steamer trade between Bengal and Assam on the Brahmaputra and Megna—Tables 8 and 9—Although Bengal and Assam are now connected by railway, the greater portion of the trade between the two Provinces during the year was still carried by river. The imports from Assam were double the exports to that Province. The principal articles imported and their chief destination were tea, stone and lime, rape and mustard seed, jute, and husked rice to Calcutta; unhusked rice and timber to Dacca; coal to Eastern Bengal and Dacca. The articles in the export trade were European cotton piece-goods, metals, mustard and rape oil, gram and pulse, salt, refined sugar, and iron and steel from Calcutta; kerosene oil from Eastern Bengal and Dacca; unrefined sugar from Dacca, Eastern Bengal, and Calcutta; husked rice from Eastern and Northern Bengal; provisions from Calcutta, Eastern Bengal, and Dacca; spices from Dacca and Calcutta, and leaf-tobacco from Northern Bengal.

THE TRADE OF CALCUTTA, TABLES 12 TO 35

7. The most important statistics in this volume are comprised in this head, for the largest proportion of the internal trade of the Province has Calcutta for its origin or destination. These tables bring into view the nature and volume of the trade, and the routes and directions taken by it, for imports and for exports. The quantity and value of the trade in each of the last three years are stated below (merchandise, excluding animals and treasure):—

There was in the year an increase of about 32½ per cent in the trade carried by inland steamers, and a small increase in the rail-borne trade; but the trade by boat and road fell off.

The weight carried by rail represented last year 64·6 per cent of the whole, and it may be said that of the trade of Calcutta with the country, apart from the sea-borne trade, about two-thirds are ordinarily carried by rail. That portion of the trade which is carried by boat was about a fifth, and the steamer trade under a tenth of the trade; while the trade carried by road is still smaller, being little more than six per cent of the whole. These proportions are reckoned on weights, which are rendered with much more accuracy than values. The trade which is moved by steam—whether rail or river steamer—is progressive in its nature, while the trade carried otherwise does not appear to increase, although it must be expected that there will always be a considerable boat traffic in a country covered by the network of water-ways which forms such a conspicuous physical feature of the Province.

8. The articles imported into, and exported from, Calcutta in the internal trade indicate the character of the city as a great commercial and industrial centre. In the main, the imports consist of food-grains and other articles required either for export by sea to foreign countries or for the supply of local factories, or raw material needed for both purposes—such as jute, coal, and cotton—supplemented by the food stuffs needed for the sustenance of a population which may be taken to be not less than a million souls. The exports again consist of articles imported from foreign countries for distribution throughout North-Eastern India or made in the local factories, gunny-bags being prominent here. The list appended shows at a glance the nature of the internal trade of Calcutta. The articles are entered in the order of their importance in the trade:—

Principal Imports	Principal Exports
Jute, raw	Cotton piecegoods
Grain (mainly rice) and pulse	Salt
Tea	Metals and metalware, chiefly iron and steel, with brass and copper
Oilseeds, chiefly linseed and rapeseed	Grain (chiefly rice) and pulse
Coal	Sugar
Fruits and vegetables, fresh, and provisions (for local consumption and for shipment to Burma)	Railway material
Hides and skins	Cotton yarn
Indigo	Vegetable oils, chiefly mustard and cocoanut
Cotton, raw	Gunny bags and cloth
Metals, namely brassware and copperware (for local use)	Spices
Lac	Apparel
Silk, raw	Mineral oil—kerosene
Hay and straw, for local use

The fluctuations in some of the principal imports and exports are briefly noticed in the subjoined paragraphs:

Imports

9. Jute, raw—Owing to restricted crops in the two years antecedent to last year the imports were limited. But with a better yield in 1900-01 imports from the chief producing districts were 30 per cent larger than in 1899-1900. The Dacca district with 8½ million maunds heads the list of supplying districts; Faridpur and Pabna each contributed a little over 3 million maunds, and Mymensingh and Rangpur each 2¼ million maunds. The quantity brought by rail was 43·4 per cent of the total trade, that carried by steamer standing second with 36 per cent, supplies by boat were 16·6 per cent and by road 4 per cent of the whole.

10. Grain and pulse—The imports of gram and pulse decreased, the Nadia district sending 1½ million maunds less than in 1899-1900 and the Faridpur district a million maunds less. The imports by rail were 68 per cent of the whole. The heaviest fall in the imports of rice, husked, was from the 24-Parganas, Burdwan, Backergunge, Midnapore, and Hooghly. The imports were largely by boat (chiefly from Backergunge), these being about 56 per cent of the total quantity received, imports by rail being 27 per cent. The quantity of rice, unhusked, also decreased. The importations by boat, chiefly from the 24-Parganas, Khulna, Hooghly and Jessore were 51 per cent of the total imports, imports by rail, chiefly from the Burdwan district, amounting to 31 per cent. There was a very large decrease in the imports of wheat from the United Provinces and Bengal; imports by rail represent 77 per cent of this trade.

11. Tea—An increase of 8·2 per cent. Imports from Assam comprised 74 per cent; from the Duars, 16 per cent; and from Darjeeling 8·3 per cent of the imports. About 62 per cent was imported by steamer and 38 per cent by rail.

12. Oilseeds—The most important of these is linseed, the yield of which in Bengal and the United Provinces was restricted. Imports fell by about 2¾ million maunds, nearly half the reduction being in imports from Bihar; imports by rail were 89 per cent of the total trade. Mustard and rape seed also declined by about 665,000 maunds. This seed also is mostly carried by rail.

13. Coal—This trade was phenomenally active, in consequence of the boom in prices, and there was an increase of nearly 18 million maunds in the imports, almost entirely by rail from the collieries in Bengal. Imports from Assam by river approximated to about 250,000 maunds.

14. Hides and skins—The imports of hides into Calcutta, mainly raw or undressed, were smaller than the abnormally large trade in 1899-1900, which was a result of cattle mortality in the drought; but they were much larger than in any other year. The chief exporting mart is Cawnpore, and the railway carries most of the trade.

15. Indigo—Imports also declined slightly owing to the heavy fall in prices resulting from the competition of synthetic indigo. Bihar contributed 68·6 per cent of the total imports, and the United Provinces 29·4 per cent. The trade was practically all by rail.

16. Cotton, raw—Imports declined by 14 per cent, the diminution being due to the high level of prices and the depression of the Bengal manufacturing industry. The quantity brought by rail formed nearly 71 per cent of the total imports, the bulk of the remainder being carried by inland steamers, chiefly from Dacca, Rangpur, and Assam.

Exports

17. Cotton piecegoods and yarn, European and Indian.—The trade declined heavily in the year, owing to the depression which existed in the cotton-spinning industry and the existence of conditions amongst the people which discouraged consumption. Of both yarn and piecegoods the largest proportion was sent to districts in Bengal, comparatively little being sent to markets beyond the provincial limits. A certain quantity is sent to such centres as Cawnpore and Delhi, but the proportion of that trade to the whole is not important.

18. Salt—The quantity of salt exported, though smaller than in 1899-1900, was larger than in 1898-99. The largest quantities were sent mainly to Eastern Bengal and to Bihar. The exports by river to Assam aggregated over half a million maunds. Of the total exports of about 8¼ million maunds 5 millions were carried by rail, 1¾ million by boat, and 1½ million by steamer.

19. Sugar—This trade attained somewhat important dimensions in the year, owing to the great activity in the importation of beet-sugar from Austria-Hungary and Germany. The sugar was sent mainly to Dacca, and to Northern and Western Bengal.

General

20. On the whole, while imports by all internal routes into Calcutta were a little larger than in the preceding year, exports from the city were smaller.

21. So far as the statistics enable the course of this trade to be followed, its dimensions are unimportant except in respect of coined silver (Government rupees). The imports and exports of gold are quite trifling, nor is the trade in silver bullion large except for imports by rail from Bombay: in the last three years the silver bullion imported was valued at Rs. 138 lakhs, and less than 35 lakhs represented the exports in the same period.

The inflow and outflow of rupees, however, are extremely large, the imports in the three years aggregating 1,044 lakhs, while the exports were almost exactly double that figure, amounting to 2,021 lakhs. It should not, however, be assumed that such a vast excess of exports of rupees represents normal conditions. Two out of the three years were seasons of drought and famine, with prices of food-grains ranging at an abnormally high level, while the traffic in them was also abnormally active, great stocks being directed to the centres of distress; and these factors operated to greatly increase the demand for rupees in the districts whence the food-grains were moved. It is probable that in the three years following 1900-01 it will be found that the conditions of import and export of rupees in the internal trade will have been materially modified.
